PohlmanUSA, which is regionally and nationally known for court reporting and litigation services, has announced the expansion of the MyDocFileServe? (MDFS) electronic filing system into eight more Illinois counties for asbestos cases. The system is already heavily relied upon for the asbestos docket in Madison County, Cook County and St. Clair County, Illinois.

MyDocFileServe? is designed to allow electronic eFiling and eService of documents in one transaction, both simultaneously and securely for complex, multi-party litigation cases. The expansion of this service makes MDFS available in a total of eleven counties including: Cook County, Macon County, Madison County, Marion County, McLean County, Morgan County, St. Clair County, Tazewell County, Washington County, Wayne County, and Williamson County, Illinois.

?This online service and docket management system was custom-built by our Pohlman technology team, and with its robust capabilities for advance search, sorting and reporting, our clients do their work in a more cost-effective and time-efficient way,? said PohlmanUSA CEO, Deborah Walters.

Pohlman?s motto is We?re Always Listening®, and client input was taken into consideration not only when building the product, but for expansion. Walters states ?We worked alongside plaintiff and defense firms, and personnel from the court clerk?s offices to ensure this product fulfilled the needs of all parties, and when it was clear the needs of clients warranted an MDFS expansion to more counties, we acted promptly to make it happen.?
