Pensacola, Fla. ? Though it is the ?most wonderful time of the year,? the holiday season can be a financially stressful time for some individuals and families and is, unfortunately, also a time when debt balances can significantly increase. To help mitigate the problem before it gets worse, bankruptcy attorneys, Lewis and Jurnovoy, are encouraging members of their community who are financially struggling to seek out debt relief now.

Martin Lewis and Steven Jurnovoy have been partnered as bankruptcy lawyers for over two decades, so they have seen time and time again the causes and effects of financial trouble. Though these situations can be stressful and full of many unknowns, Lewis and Jurnovoy want struggling individuals to know that there is always hope, and there is always a way for a person to get back on their feet. The two lawyers explain that the best first step towards getting out of financial trouble is to seek help from a professional. Every individual?s situation is different, so having a professional, whether that be a financial advisor or a bankruptcy lawyer, take a look at the specifics is a great way to get started.

Lewis and Jurnovoy offer free consultation appointments, and they can be conducted over the phone or in-person at one of their four office locations across the Florida Panhandle. In addition, the two lawyers host a live television show called ?Bankruptcy Hour? that they use to discuss topics such as foreclosures, credit card debt, and bankruptcy. Viewers can even submit questions directly to bkhour@4-debtor.com for Lewis and Jurnovoy to answer during the show, as the goal of ?Bankruptcy Hour? is to keep the community informed and to help individuals who are struggling financially.

With over 20 years of experience, Lewis and Jurnovoy are always ready to assist individuals who are considering filing for bankruptcy. They understand how stressful the process can be, so Lewis and Jurnovoy work hard to make the experience as swift and smooth as possible for their clients.
