3rd Rock Products, Laguna Beach based supplement business, has provided the answer to the question, "can pills actually make you smarter?" They dive deeply into the subject by presenting findings on articles published on their website as well as through their own product, Steady Focus, which delivers a mixture of Caffeine and L-Theanine through 60 vegetarian and all natural capsules.

As far as a Nootropic Supplement goes, 3rd Rock Products believes that the reason this particular mix increases not only alertness, but brain function is due to the addition of the L-Theanine. While there are many products on the market which implement the power of caffeine to increase alertness, 3rd Rock Products harnesses L- Theanine Benefits to create a supplement which offers the same boost of energy without the crash that follows.

While the product doesn't transform any current characteristics or advance IQ immediately, the addition of these capsules may help to multiply the cognitive capabilities already present, so that individuals may use them to their fullest potential. The company stands behind their product with a 100% money back customer satisfaction guarantee, inviting new potential consumers to try the supplement before making an educated decision on whether or not it might work for them.

The answer to the above question can be seen in various case studies throughout the medical community, but 3rd Rock Products points to customer reviews to offer more insight on the subject. One such customer left a comment on the company's online retail sales outlet, writing: "Theanine, found in tea, is a non-essential amino acid that's similar in structure to glutamine. It's relaxing, without being sedating, and has gained popularity within the nootropic community as an attention enhancer, especially when paired with a stimulant (like caffeine, which it is commonly stacked with at a ratio of 2:1 caffeine:l-theanine). It's widely believed to derive at least part of its attention-enhancing efficacy to its ability to attenuate the over-excitability or 'jitters' many people experience while taking stimulants alone."

Most of the reviews left by consumers on the customer sight offer positive feedback, with a majority of 5 star rankings for those who have tried the Steady Focus brand of Nootropics. 3rd Rock products invites new consumers to leave their own feedback to continue the enhancement and evolution of the product.
