California based supplement company, 3rd Rock products, has made it clear that pills for concentration are the possible answer to the midday slump caused by coffee and other energy enhancing beverages. The company uses natural methods to create a vegetarian capsule and combines ingredients to not only energize but also help an individual feel more focused.

Armed with caffeine and L-Theanine, Steady Focus, the concentration supplements provided by 3rd Rock Products, gives users the same wakeful sensation as coffee with none of the associated anxiety or crash. Instead, the caffeine is able to interact with the brain in a positive way while the L-Theanine calms and reduces jitters.

One satisfied customer commented on the company's online sales channel saying: "Steady Focus has been a real blessing to me. I take it first thing in the morning and after 20 to 30 minutes I notice that I'm very alert and can get more done. The caffeine "pick-me-up" is not that different than what I get from drinking a few cups of coffee, but my improved ability to focus is definitely noticeable. I'd say that based on using Steady Focus, I've been able to get more of my to-do list done in the morning. Since I have not changed anything else in my morning ritual, I have to assume that my improved efficiency is due to the higher energy and concentration levels that I'm experiencing."

Sold in bottles of 60 capsules, the company uses a unique formula of rice flour to create the outside of the pill, making it safe for vegetarians, unlike the gelatin based capsules used by other companies. It has a 100% customer satisfaction guarantee backed by the seller.

The midday or mid-morning slump occurs when the caffeine reaction from coffee or energy drinks fades. Steady Focus helps an individual avoid this, and tapers off naturally in a way that may further relax an individual without causing drowsiness. When the taper begins, users can follow directions from the company to take a second pill for the day, increasing energy and breaking through the wall that holds many back from reaching their work day goals.
