

The Mabra Law Firm in Atlanta Explains Who Can Sue For A Wrongful Death

January 14, 2022

Atlanta, Georgia - January 14, 2022 -

The Mabra Law Firm in Atlanta, Georgia, has updated its blog with a post explaining who can sue for wrongful death. Certain members of the victim's family can file a wrongful death lawsuit against the at-fault party. The blog post suggests that certain civil legal remedies can provide monetary compensation to the surviving loved ones of the deceased. According to the best personal injury law firm in Atlanta, a spouse of the victim can file a wrongful death lawsuit against individuals as well as organizations to seek justice on behalf of a loved one who recently passed away due to someone else's negligence.

The blog post adds that not all deaths qualify for a wrongful death lawsuit, suggesting that the cause of death has to meet specific criteria for a wrongful death suit to be filed. According to Ronnie Mabra, the top wrongful death attorney in Atlanta, GA, a wrongful death lawsuit could be caused by a work-related accident, car accident, bike accident, truck accident, medical malpractice, medical negligence, defective product, criminal acts, drunk driving accident, drug-related accident, and elder abuse.

The blog post states that the law related to wrongful death is not the same everywhere and varies from one state to another, though everywhere, the law allows a loved one to file a lawsuit against the negligent party.

This includes the spouse, an adult child, or parents. The Atlanta personal injury law firm states that a domestic partner or a civil union can file a wrongful death case on behalf of their partner in some states.

In some cases, if the deceased does not have immediate family members, a personal representative responsible for managing the estate can file the case. The Atlanta personal injury law firm suggests that a wrongful death lawsuit may be brought against a range of people, companies, employees, or a government agency.

The blog post explains that a wrongful death lawsuit gives loved ones the ability to seek compensation for their economic and non-economic losses. An experienced wrongful death attorney in Atlanta, Georgia, can represent the victim's family against the responsible party and hold them accountable for their negligent, reckless, or careless actions.

The blog post outlines the types of compensation in a wrongful death lawsuit. This includes burial and funeral expenses, end-of-life medical expenses, loss of consortium, loss of compensation, loss of the deceased's life, pain and suffering, and loss of earning capacity.

The Atlanta wrongful death lawyer states that a victim's loved one can file a claim within two years of the accident, urging immediate action. The blog post mentions a few exceptions to the statute of limitations, which states that claims can't be filed after five years of the loved one's death. An experienced wrongful death lawyer can help the deceased's loved one to get the right compensation for their claim.

The Mabra Firm has many expert wrongful death attorneys in Atlanta who are able to provide legal assistance in a wrongful death lawsuit. Anybody seeking legal help can take a proper course of action under the guidance of skilled personal injury attorneys.
