Santa Clarita, Ca. The Healing Touch announced that it has released a new version of their "Crema para las Estrias" morning and night cream. The announcement comes as The Healing Touch transferred its manufacturing from the United States to France.

The cream is being manufactured under the same label but with higher quality ingredients that have historically proved to be more effective for The Healing Touch customers.

The first batch of the new mix has already reached Amazon.com and is currently being purchased by new clients as well as returning clients who have experienced desired results.

"We had an opportunity to improve on a product that our clients already loved," stated Raul Meza, CEO of The Healing Touch. "Most companies won't touch a winning product out of fear or ruining a good thing. Here at The Healing Touch, we saw the opportunity to improve the results that our clients were already seeing, and we owed it to be the best we could be so they could also feel the best they could feel about themselves. Reading the first group of reviews that have come in we can tell that our efforts have paid off in favor of our clients."

The news release also reports an improvement in the cream delivery system by an added spoon. This spoon helps keep the unused portion of the cream cleaner by avoided human touch. There is also a reported improvement in the packaging which makes it more durable during its deliver process. The Healing Touch also reports that this in not the only cream in their product line that they have made improvements on.
