November 11, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

A Denver, CO based business is proud to announce that they have added reputation management to their portfolio of services. As one of the most respected online marketing management companies in the Denver area, they felt taking charge of a business' online reputation is an essential element to include in their services. Customers are encouraged to contact the company online to get started.

Company representative Matt Gronbeck says: "Reputation management is a vital element of online marketing. It is said that it takes years to build up a reputation, but only an instant to destroy it. Never was this more true than today, with social media and other online platforms ensuring that information - including negative information - travels at the speed of light. We want to help companies manage their online reputation, thereby ensuring that they don't fall victim to negativity."

City Web Company is currently also offering all-inclusive streamlined pricing. Businesses can order their packages online, which will immediately show them how much they will have to pay for the service or services they choose. Either way, City Web Company is committed to offering affordable services and they are sure businesses will be pleasantly surprised with the prices offered.

Research has shown how important online reputation actually is for a business. Eighty-seven percent of people will first research a business online before they decide whether or not they are interested in that company. Additionally, 52% of those will search for online reviews before they decide whether to purchase certain products or services.

"These statistics truly show that reputation management should be the number one priority for any business," adds Matt Gronbeck. "It is not something that companies should think of as an optional extra, but rather as an absolutely essential element of their overall marketing strategy."

Through these services, businesses can see an increase in customers overall. Additionally, it ensures existing clients retain their trust and belief in the business. Put together, this increases the bottom line for any company.
