February 2022: A newly released guide by Gov Relations examines the difference between hazard and risk. The company's experts produced the article that was published on Gov Relations' website. The article served as a guide for employers and employees to understand workplace safety.

This guide was designed to highlight the importance of risk assessments. Private industry employers reported 2.7 million nonfatal workplace injuries and illnesses in 2020 and 4,764 fatal work injuries in the U.S. Employers need to actively assess and implement strategies to prevent work-related injuries and illnesses. Most employers don?t take this responsibility seriously and are not even aware of the difference between hazard and risk.

The article focuses on the main difference between risks and hazards at the workplace. According to Gov Relations, their experts conducted meticulous market research to create the guide. One of the key points in the new publication is the need to effectively manage risks and hazards in the workplace to reduce injuries. The guide primarily focuses on explaining the main aspects of workplace risks and hazards. It also includes an analysis of different types of hazards and how risks and hazards need to be managed. The guide provides an overview of all the important factors an employer needs to know. Readers can find the full guide here.
