Fort Lauderdale, FL - The Source addiction treatment center in Fort Lauderdale recently helped a man by the name of John overcome his addiction by treating the true source of his substance abuse. The Source welcomed John in as family, caring about him as a human being with dignity and treating him with the respect that everyone deserves.

After completing treatment at The Source, John was moved to leave the center a 5-star review on Google. He wrote, ?The Source truly does treat you like family. They understand and they care?. Many alcohol and drug rehab centers apply a one-size-fits-all treatment program and treat each person as a case and not a unique person. In his review, John commented that every staff member he met during his time at The Source took a direct and personal approach which helped him to face his addiction ?head-on?.

Treating the individual, not just their addiction, with a holistic approach leads to better recovery outcomes because addiction is often a symptom of a deeper underlying issue. Many who struggle with substance abuse also have undiagnosed mental health conditions such as depression, anxiety, bipolar disorder, or post-traumatic stress disorder. The Source strives to be the #1 addiction treatment center in Fort Lauderdale Florida.

In John?s case, he suffered from severe depression. ?One staff member I have to mention is a tech named Caileigh,? John said in his review. ?She took a personal interest in me and went out of her way to help lift me out of severe depression.?

John was inspired by Caileigh and the rest of the team at The Source who helped him understand his mental health condition so that it could be treated properly. The personal approach that was extended to John is what makes a significant impact in many people?s lives because years of struggling with addiction and mental health disorders can leave people isolated and alone.

Being treated like a cherished member of a family helps clients like John begin to see themselves differently. Their circumstances begin to change from the isolating nature of addiction into a life of connection, fulfillment, and stability.

In John?s review, he went on to say, ?I consider (Caileigh) a friend, and I don?t have many friends. I consider everyone at The Source my friends. Not friends, actually, family.?

This genuine caring approach is what sets The Source apart from other addiction treatment centers. It's what allows them to provide a truly transformative experience in people?s lives.

The Source?s holistic approach, which treats the whole person and not just the addiction, is combined with multi-disciplinary expertise, allowing their expert team to provide treatment for co-occurring mental health disorders such as the depression that John experienced. It?s often a combination of effective whole-patient treatment with the compassion that so many people in recovery desperately need, that achieves the best results.

Any person who feels alone in their struggle with addiction and mental health should contact The Source to learn how they can help. When clients call The Source, they won?t be connected to a call center, they?ll speak directly with a member of their team.
