PohlmanUSA, respected nationally for impeccable court reporting and litigation services, is making a charitable donation to Project Steno to celebrate National Court Reporting and Captioning Week. Supporting the court reporting profession?s stability and growth is a priority for PohlmanUSA.

Project Steno promotes the profession of court reporting and captioning by using the community around them to reach the next generation of court reporting professionals that our industry needs to meet the growing demand for the legal community. With their introduction-to-steno program, they are able to provide insight and opportunities in the field of court reporting prior to enrollment. This program allows them to advise potential candidates with the best school for each individual, as well as offer merit awards to subsidize tuition costs for eligible students.

When asked about the donation PohlmanUSA CEO, Deborah Walters said, ?We take every opportunity possible to honor the court reporting profession, and our donation to Project Steno is just another gesture to demonstrate our support for this program. We are thankful for their efforts, and we are excited to see how they continue to prepare the next generation of court reporters.?

There is currently a national court reporter shortage of over 5,500 unfilled court reporter positions. ?There are few careers where you can be your own boss, travel the world, showcase your skills while earning an above average income with a two-year education program. The exciting part is that as you improve your craft, you can increase your earning potential by providing additional services such as rough draft transcripts, real-time, CART and other higher skilled services to be well on your way to earning a six figure income,? said Deborah Walters, PohlmanUSA?s CEO.
