Mediterranean Table, recently added a new product to their lineup of infused olive oils, the Toscano 100% IGP Certified EVOO.

Freshly pressed in Tuscany, this olive oil gives off an undeniable aroma that you can easily identify as fresh notes of artichokes. According to the company, this makes it an excellent choice for finishing salads, pasta, meats, etc.

Mediterranean Table offers several olive oils infused with other attractive ingredients. Each oil comes in a 500 ml Italian glass bottle, and the available choices include the Garlic Infused EVOO, Lemon Infused EVOO, Calabrian Chili Infused EVOO, and more.

Those who have tried several of its oils and found them similarly delightful don't have to buy each bottle individually. The company offers a selection of certain picks in sets based on certain factors. For instance, longtime customers may wish to get a set of oils among a kitchen's most used flavors. The 4-Piece Garden Set includes the Roasted Garlic, Baby Basil, Amalfi Lemon EVOO, and an IGP Balsamic Glaze from Modena. Notably, this selection is ideal for those unsure which bottles to try first.

Olive oil carries many benefits that various recipes have conferred from worldwide for hundreds of years. Infused olive oils take this a step further, allowing chefs and other parties to cultivate a certain flavor with even greater ease or explore new horizons with existing recipes. Olive oil can also be ideal in treating certain hair and skin conditions. Therefore, the company points out that its infused products have aromatic properties. Many will find these properties much more soothing and useful than traditional products.

Because olive oil is an antioxidant, it may help prevent or repair cancer-causing UV radiation damage.

When compared to other types of fats and oils that humans consume, it has an extremely high concentration of a component called squalene. It penetrates pores and improves skin at the cellular level. According to research, squalene also has anti-inflammatory properties that can reduce redness and swelling.? - Mediterranean Table.

When applied directly to the skin, users may also find that the vitamins it carries can penetrate through. Olive oil has vitamins A, D, and K and vitamin E, and those who prefer to use it in this manner often report that it feels gentle and light on their skin.

These are far from the only olive oil benefits for the skin. Mediterranean Table says that olive oil has been used in some settings to reduce the incidence of scars and stretch marks. Oil is naturally water repellent. So, olive oil on the skin functions as a waterproof barrier that prevents moisture from escaping, keeping the skin from drying out. As a result, the skin remains hydrated for longer.

The company does advise that people do a patch test if they intend to use infused olive oils. It is unlikely that an adverse reaction will occur. However, they recommend that customers do this to avoid any unwanted effects.

Many people are known to be in the practice of using olive oil as a moisturizer, rubbing it on their dry elbows and cuticles in a bid to keep their skin hydrated at these points. Mediterranean Table points out that there may be better products for this specific purpose. However, some may find that olive oil suits their needs perfectly. Similarly, olive oil is famously used as a deep-conditioning treatment on hair, with beautiful results that users swear by.

Finally, oil works well as a general makeup remover, even for waterproof products. Since it helps dissolve the wax and oils in makeup products, users will remove their makeup with greater ease. Moreover, they will smell wonderful afterward if they opt to use one of Mediterranean Table's infused olive oils.

Olive oils infused with various special ingredients, including white truffles and more, can be found on the company's official website. Customers and other interested parties may contact Glen Wagner of Mediterranean Table if they wish to pursue any further inquiries.
