Ageing in place is an enticing prospect for those in the final days of their lives as they get to spend the little time they have in a place where they have built memories for years, amongst the people that they call their own. Whether they are restricted to the house due to old age or due to a disability, every individual has different needs for levels of care. Home Instead's home care services take into consideration the specific needs of its clients. The company creates a tailor-made service option where clients can choose between daily or weekly home-care visits or full 24-hour live-in care. A live-in carer can help with all domestic tasks, and personal care needs as well as accompany care recipients on errands and social visits.

Home Instead's core philosophy is to offer personalised care services that provide just the right amount of help that is required to those who need it. This helps those who are being taken care of live a life of dignity while relying on the care providers only for the tasks that are beyond them while also letting them keep tight control over their budgets and make their limited resources last.

At the centre of the company's mission to deliver its cost-effective and highly customizable services are its CAREgivers, a monicker that is reserved for its care providers who go through a course of industry-leading training sessions to receive accredited certifications upon completion along with thorough background checks. CAREgivers are handpicked to meet the needs of each client to ensure there is a perfect match every time. By recognizing the client's needs and only presenting them with the CAREgivers who are best suited to provide the services they require, Home Instead ensures complete client satisfaction on every visit.
