The Law Office of Purav Bhatt, based in Chicago, Illinois, is inviting their community to get in touch immediately if they require the assistance of an expert criminal defense lawyer. Attorney Bhatt, a prominent Chicago gun attorney, specializes in representing people against felony indictments in the Greater Chicago region.

Some of the most frequently seen felony charges include domestic violence, homicide, assault crimes, weapons offenses and possession of controlled substances. If charged with a felony offense in the state of Illinois (and if proven guilty), an individual may receive a sentence of a minimum of one year or more in prison and fines of up to $25,000 or more. A felony conviction often comes with grave consequences, including a lifetime criminal record, being required to pay costly fines, having to submit DNA to the state of Illinois and the loss of certain constitutional rights (including the ability to possess a firearm and to vote).

Depending on the offense, some consequences may include being required to notify neighbors of a felony status and losing potential employment opportunities. Citizens who have a felony conviction cannot be employed by the federal government, including all branches of the US military. Such individuals will also be excluded from any form of government aid, even if they have previously paid into those programs, including those such as social security and unemployment, Section 8 housing and food stamps and federal grants and loans.

Regarding the average knowledge of an individual on legal matters, Attorney Bhatt states, ?Most people are not familiar with the law. The average person's knowledge of the law is more than likely limited to what they see on television or read in newspapers and books. When they do get involved with the criminal law system, they do not know what to do, or how to handle the situation. As a result, the need for information and assistance from criminal lawyers is crucial for those who are about to get involved with the criminal law system."
