Calgary, AB based Dank Cannabis Dispensary is pleased to announce that their new online ordering platform will soon be ready to serve customers in Dover and beyond. The system will facilitate customers' experience beyond the in-person amenities that the community has come to expect. Weed delivery is going to be available in early March of this year.

"Our customers already expect the best cannabis experience in Calgary when they come to our store," says Dank Cannabis Dispensary proudly. "However, we recognize that we need to keep improving our services to ensure every customer can get the products they want with minimal inconvenience. In some cases, we have noted that certain customers either do not have the time to visit the store in person or simply prefer to keep to themselves. Whatever their reasons may be, we want them to have an easy option to purchase any cannabis product they want through our store."

Customers in Dover, in Calgary, are already familiar with Dank Cannabis Dispensary and the charm it brings to the local community. They reassure their community that the in-store experience they have come to love will continue to be available to anyone who stops by. New customers who learn of the store and its offerings in the future are invited to visit Dank Cannabis Dispensary's premises at least once to browse their shelves and talk with one of their "budtenders," individuals who are both passionate and knowledgeable about cannabis products.

For instance, they may wish to learn what the difference between each product category is and what customers generally use them for. Some like to roll their own sticks, so they are likely to buy their preferred flower (variety) and the appropriate accessories. On the other hand, some trust Dank Cannabis Dispensary to supply perfectly rolled sticks, also known as pre-rolls. Notably, each of these categories is further split based on their distinct brands, THC or CBD content and more. This can get confusing for those who are only just starting their exploration of cannabis products, but Dank Cannabis Dispensary confirms that they are welcome to direct all questions to the store's budtenders.

"Not only do staff have knowledge about cannabis strains and their products," shares a glowing review from C. Ross, "the cool and interactive arcade-like self kiosk (if you're too anxious to talk to the employees about finding something,) definitely helps give a kick to its own unique environment. Definitely inviting, and welcoming. Would recommend to a friend!"

Many reviews on this platform praise the store's easygoing atmosphere and how helpful their staff are. Dank Cannabis Dispensary runs a clean store with a conscientiously designed layout that is meant to draw the customer's eye to products they might be interested in. Part of the reason behind this is the store's commitment to supporting conversations around cannabis among local communities – they encourage their customers to try a variety of products before they decide to settle with a specific item. While the majority of the store's products are cannabis-based in some way, they all have unique properties that may be more appealing.

Customers can call the store to follow up on any inquiries as well, if they so wish, though the store recommends a personal visit because this tends to foster the most effective form of communication. If the first product they try is not to their liking, they should try a different one on their next purchase. Some customers take a while to discover what they prefer, and the store says a fair number tend to have strong feelings regarding their preferences. Dank Cannabis Dispensary simply considers it their job to support all these individuals and help them find the products they are looking for.

Dank Cannabis Dispensary invites their community to stay in touch with their latest news and announcements via the store's official social media pages, such as on Instagram and Facebook. Once the new online ordering system is ready, an update will be shared on these platforms. Until then, those who wish to start exploring the world of cannabis products at once are welcome to stop by the store in person. The location of their Dover dispensary and more are available online.
