February 28, 2022 -
February 2022: OC Partnership releases a new article that analyzes how to reduce inequality in education. The report, published on OC Partnership?s website, was compiled using expert opinions on the topic. The report was released amid an increased focus on educational disparities highlighted due to the pandemic. The full report can be found here.

As a result of the pandemic, education has been disrupted nationwide, shining a spotlight on racial and economic disparities and creating the possibility of a lost generation. In many minority communities, students already faced difficulty accessing resources, ranging from books to counselors, even taking advantage of extracurricular activities. The publication analyzes the different inequalities that exist in education in the U.S. The experts in the report explained ways to reduce this inequality.

For the report, educationalists were consulted for their professional views on bridging the educational gap. Digital education experts were also quoted in the article. The final compilation and review of the report were overseen by OC Partnership?s team of sociology experts. The experts interviewed for this article discussed the disparities in education in the U.S. The reports found eight ways to bridge the educational inequality gap.

Since its inception, OC Partnership has provided information, advice, research, and analyses for helping sociology students and anyone looking to gain more information on societies. The report was published as part of their regular research on education and society for their readers.
