According to the website, ?A significant part of my practice involves representing defendants and businesses in federal cases. If you are being charged by the United States Attorney with federal charges you will quickly find that the setting, procedure, and consequences are significantly greater than being charged for state offenses. The federal criminal process is a complicated maze that is exceedingly difficult for the inexperienced person to understand and navigate. The United States Attorney?s Office employs federal prosecutors who are very experienced and have the resources of the United States government at their disposal. Investigations are headed by agents from the FBI, the DEA, the IRS, the Postal Inspector General, and the Department of Treasury to name a few.?

The website adds, ?That is why the attorney you select to represent you is the first of many particularly important decisions you must make. You will need an attorney who is familiar and experienced with the federal court system, the US Attorneys handling the case and the judges hearing the case.?
