Chicagoland Fireplace and Chimney Restoration, a company based in Villa Park, IL, wants to inform homeowners in Chicago and neighboring areas that they offer masonry repair for chimneys and fireplaces. Repairing chimneys is essential because they may cause house fires, smoky fireplaces, carbon monoxide poisoning, and other problems. Thus, it is vital to have the chimney repaired by expert and experienced professionals.

Typically requiring repair is the chimney cap, which is on top of the chimney and seals the top opening in order to prevent rainwater and humidity from entering that can result into deterioration. Chimney caps are often incorrectly constructed or they can deteriorate. The team of professionals from Chicagoland Fireplace and Chimney Restoration have the necessary experience and expertise whether the chimney cap to be repaired involves working with brick and mortar, concrete, or rock.

Meanwhile, the firebox is that part of the chimney system is where someone creates a fire in the fireplace. The appropriate firebox is lined with firebrick, which is a kind of refractory ceramic, which can weaken and become broken after several years of use. This part of the chimney is often in need of repair. The company recommends a comprehensive review of the firebox every five years or so, depending on the hearth use and how often the chimney and fireplace are used.

Another part of the chimney system that may have problems is the smoke chamber, which supports the flue lining. The major issue with smoke chambers is that they are difficult to find because almost all the problems come from behind the facial wall. While other components of the chimney may appear to have no issues from the exterior, the smoke chamber can have problems. The experts from Chicagoland Fireplace and Chimney Restoration can conduct an annual chimney review and they can alert the homeowner in case there are problems with the smoke chamber and can be fixed before any safety issues start to appear.

Homeowners and property owners may also want to consider hearth repair and replacement. A damaged hearth can be dangerous and must be repaired as soon as possible. If there are any apparent problems with the way the chimney ports or doesn't, or if there is water seepage from a flow in the masonry work, it should be repaired. There are a number of ways to repair it and the professionals from Chicagoland Fireplace and Chimney Restoration truly understand what needs to be done.

Masonry and water flow problems are the two primary issues that need to be promptly addressed to ensure the security of the home. For the case of a water leak, the more it rains, the higher the possibility of other problems in the house because the water can slowly find its way to the rafter and dry plank. These wooden structures can rot or mold, problems can occur if the problem is not addressed immediately.

Established in 1996, Chicagoland Fireplace and Chimney Restoration provides professional chimney and fireplace repair for homes and properties in the Greater Chicago Area. They always make sure to provide the best possible service and take pride in making sure that all of the jobs they undertake are performed quickly and exceptionally well.
