March 2022: Be-Safe releases a new article that discusses home safety rules for children. The guide, published on Be-Safe's website, was compiled using expert opinions on the topic. The guide was released to highlight

In the United States, unintentional injuries are the leading cause of death for children and teens, killing more than 7,000 children and teens each year. Injuries caused by motor vehicle falls, suffocation, poisoning, drowning, and fires are the leading causes of child injuries. These injuries can often be prevented. The publication analyzes how such injuries can be avoided. The experts in the guide explained the safety rules children need to follow to keep safe.

For the guide, safety experts were consulted for their professional views on keeping children safe at home. The final compilation and review of the guide were overseen by Be-Safe's team of safety and security experts. Readers can find the full guide by visiting their page; <https://www.be-safe.org/safety-rules-for-children-at-home/>.

The experts interviewed for this article discussed numerous safety measures parents need to maintain in the home. The guide focused on key safety rules the adults need to teach their young ones to keep them safe from accidents and injury.

Since its inception, community and home safety advisor Be-Safe has provided information, advice, research, reviews, comparisons, and analyses for helping people be better informed on personal, physical, and community safety. The guide was published as part of their regular research on home and family safety for their readers.

"This guide explores important aspects of child safety to help you ensure the safety of your little loved ones. Our guide is backed by expert analysis, so provide accurate and transparent advice for our readers," said Dennis Chapman, Senior Security Consultant for Be Safe's website. He believes in providing safety and security advice presented in a simplified form for readers to understand.

In its efforts to spread safety and security awareness in communities, Be-Safe offers recommendations for applications and advice on essential safety information for individuals, communities, and the public. It also discusses security products and services, how they work and why they are essential in ensuring home and personal safety and security.

Security consultant Kory Rex said, "With this guide, we aim to help readers understand all the elements of home safety and the security systems commonly used in residential properties so people can effectively safeguard their homes and their loved ones."
