According to the company website, ?Firebox Repair: The firebox is the segment of the chimney system in which someone assembles a fire. A suitable firebox is lined with firebrick, a material of refractory ceramic, which can become broken or weakened after years of use. This region of the chimney is frequently in need of repair. It is suggested to have a comprehensive review of the firebox every five years or so, depending on hearth use and the frequency of chimney or fireplace use. We always promise to give our best and this is how we have stayed in business for this long. We believe in providing professional services that are above industry standards.?

The company further explained why chimneys and fireplaces need to be taken care of. Using a fireplace and chimney for years can result in damages and normal wear and tear. These damages can result in the malfunction of the chimney band fireplace including filling the room with smoke. Some malfunctions can be solved by chimney sweeping to remove debris and tar that collects in the chimney over years of use. People living in older houses need to take good care of their chimneys and fireplaces because they are more prone to damage caused by age. This is why it is recommended that these older house chimneys and fireplaces should be checked by experts and restored.
