There are many people living with sleep apnea in the United States. This is why companies such as Insurance Covered CPAP make it their focus to assist sleep apnea patients to access sleep apnea products through insurance. This access makes sure that the patients can get these products at a reduced price or without cost, thus taking the cost burden of the sleep apnea products off their backs. This has enabled many people who could not afford sleep apnea products to get them and solve their sleep apnea problems.

The company announced the addition of new items and provided information on people who suffer from sleep apnea. "It is believed that 18 million people in the United States, or around 1 in every 15 people, live with sleep apnea," according to the website. "This potentially fatal condition occurs when the throat passage narrows as a result of muscles relaxing too much during sleep, preventing oxygen from passing through. Sleep apnea affects about 80% of people who aren't aware of it. Sleep apnea, if left untreated, can lead to life-threatening health problems such as heart disease and stroke. It is critical to seek medical care for this problem. We've made certain that we offer the greatest sleep apnea devices on the market, which will improve people's quality of life by making their nights more comfortable. We work with insurance companies to bring the cost of these products down.?"

According to statistics provided by different studies, over 22 million Americans are suffering from sleep apnea. These people have mild to extreme sleep apnea that affects their sleep patterns. About 10% of the American population suffers from mild sleep apnea. 3.5% of the population is dealing with moderate sleep apnea and 4 % of the population has severe sleep apnea. There are many cases of sleep apnea that have not yet been identified because the sleep apnea is either mild or moderate and the patient does not have extreme interruptions that might require them to see a medical practitioner. Sleep apnea affects more men than women. The use of CPAP machines has been seen to improve daily functioning, reduce symptoms and improve emotional functioning.
