Westchester County divorce lawyer Juan Luciano (<https://divorcelawfirmnyc.com/westchester-divorce-lawyer/>) releases a new article explaining family law and divorce in New York. The lawyer mentions how divorce can be stressful for people and can also cause emotional turmoil. This is why attorney Luciano emphasizes the importance of having a lawyer who is compassionate and understands your situation in order to help you get through it.

“Family law is as complex as families themselves. When hurting families are involved, divorces and other family law matters can never be distilled into legal concepts, financial arrangements, and where the children will go on weekends and holidays. Family law deals with real people with real needs,” says the Westchester County divorce lawyer.

The lawyer discusses the differences between uncontested and contested divorce in the article. He points out that a couple must make many decisions about their children, assets, debts, and property when they decide to end their marriage. An uncontested divorce is one in which a couple can go through the divorce process without going through a trial. If a couple must go to court to reach an agreement on important issues, it is considered a contested divorce.

These are just a few of the important issues that Mr. Luciano mentions. He says that if the couple disagrees on any matters such as child support, child custody, asset division, or spousal support, then they can both go to court. In these types of scenarios, a divorce lawyer with experience is a must for a contested divorce.

In the article, attorney Luciano also discusses uncontested divorce. He mentions that uncontested divorce is when a couple comes to an agreement between themselves. In an uncontested divorce, spouses are able to reach an agreement on important issues regarding their children and assets, which allows for a divorce to be finalized without any disputes or unresolved issues.

Furthermore, the divorce attorney adds that uncontested divorces aren't necessarily friendly or amicable. Lawyers usually have to negotiate with the other party in order to come up with an agreement. This is usually done without the need for judicial adjudication and often saves time and money for both parties.

Lastly, attorney Juan Luciano emphasizes the importance of hiring a skilled divorce lawyer when it comes to matters such as child custody, spousal support, and asset division. An experienced lawyer may be able to help the client understand their rights and responsibilities in the case and hopefully help them receive a more favorable outcome.
