On its website, the company makes some recommendations for pet owners who want to clean a pet stain on their own before calling in the professionals. The company recommends, immediately after noticing the stain, to place a slightly damp cloth on it and try to soak up as much as possible. The homeowner should repeat this process a few times until the stain becomes less prominent. Then, some vinegar mixed with water can remove some of the odor. However, some difficulties may arise in rinsing this mixture out without leaving a residue.
