March 21, 2022 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

March 2022: Living By Example launched its new website to provide the latest news and stories on society and cultures for delivering content that promotes connections among people. The site focuses on subjects that help people connect with others and allow for a deeper understanding of different societies and cultures worldwide. For learning more, readers can visit the Living By Example website.

There are different societies and cultures in the world, but they are all linked in some way, regardless of their differences. Through understanding similarities and differences, people can form deeper connections and build understanding. Through its content, Living By Example hopes to provide readers with the opportunity to learn more about these different societies and help them connect through each others' stories. It serves as a guide and resources for readers to better understand how various socio-economic structures came to be.

"We strive to transform people's views of the world by delivering dynamic content. We aim to build a community that engages in stimulating conversations, meaningful topics, and shareable stories that encourage human connections and foster positive social change," said Living By Example Founder and CEO

Brian Cox.

The site offers helpful blogs focused on culture and society, featuring inspirational and informative articles on various topics related to social norms and cultural differences. It offers tips and expert advice to tackle various issues in life and society. Furthermore, the site writes stories and delivers content aimed at educating people on different cultures and societal norms. Readers interested in learning more about social norms can visit their page: <https://www.livingbyexample.org/what-are-social-norms-in-sociology/>.

"Our goal is to create quality content that brings amazing stories about cultures and shares the ideals of different cultures with our readers. We believe that people empowerment is important, especially during these trying times," said Cox, who hopes to bring more cultural diversity across the internet.

One of the more popular resources of the site is the detailed tips and advice on matters pertaining to human rights, providing advice, information, and news aimed at educating people on basic rights. It aims to deliver information on human rights worldwide. For learning more about culture and human rights, readers can visit their page: <https://www.livingbyexample.org/how-are-cultural-rights-different-from-human-rights/>.

Full details of the content and articles available can be found by visiting Living By Example.
