Pensacola, Fla. ? Martin Lewis and Steven Jurnovoy are experienced bankruptcy lawyers in Pensacola with a passion for helping individuals and families through difficult financial situations. Because they deem it important to keep their community informed about important events and changes going on in the financial world, they are taking a moment to discuss the creation of a new market analytics platform called Epiq Bankruptcy Analytics.

This software was created by Epiq, which is a large company that provides technology-aided services within the business and legal markets. As Epiq Bankruptcy Analytics gives users daily data on bankruptcy filings, it is useful for legal and bankruptcy professionals. The software is cloud-based, indexing bankruptcy filings since 2007 and using third-party data and proprietary bankruptcy analytics. Users will receive insight into adversarial proceedings, disposition metrics, and various case results.

According to Epiq, ?Visibility into this rich bankruptcy dataset enables attorneys, creditors, investors, and other professionals in the bankruptcy industry a competitive advantage and allows them to make better decisions to grow their business. Users can monitor daily bankruptcy case counts by state, court, time, or geography to determine if filing metrics are increasing or decreasing. Users can right-size their business and budgets more effectively by leveraging historical data to identify data trends for predictive analysis by analyzing case disposition and duration metrics.???
