

Moving Services Company Urges Renters To Move Before Rents Rise Further In Northern VA

April 05, 2022

Washington, District of Columbia - April 05, 2022 -
Northern Virginia-based moving and storage company MyProMovers is urging those planning to move to or within the area to bite the bullet and make it happen before the steep rise in rent prices forces them to sign up for a lease at a higher cost.

According to a report from ABC 13 News, rent prices have been increasing across Virginia for the past few months. The station reported that in January the average rent prices were up 14%. The article also quoted statistics from Realtor.com which said that the same number at the end of March was 20%. This has been due to the booming real estate market which has been consistently exceeding analyst expectations all over the country. Those who own rental properties are taking an advantage of this boom to sell them for a nice lump sum profit, reducing the options and available inventory for renters, thus reducing supply. The rising property prices also mean that those who would have normally purchased a home are waiting for prices to fall and are instead choosing to rent, thus increasing demand. This increase in demand and reduction in supply is driving prices up for renters and the trend is projected to continue at least until the end of 2022.

A spokesperson for Northern VA movers MyProMovers talks about the impending rise in rental prices and the best option for those looking to rent in Northern Virginia by saying, ?We are not going to see a fall in rental prices, if ever, until the start of 2023. If you have an important life goal you wish to accomplish like starting a new job, going to school, or pursuing other interests, there is no better time than now to take the jump and make Northern Virginia your new home. If you move now, you will also be able to lock in a lower monthly rent that will remain stable at least for the duration of your lease. The money that you hope to save by moving later will most likely be offset by the higher rent that you will end up paying if you delay the inevitable. Moreover, the summer months are when moving companies are in great demand as the number of people who want to move increases dramatically for those couple of months, prompting us to raise prices. Your best hope to save money on both fronts ? moving costs and rent is to start right now and take advantage of the market while the prices are still comparatively low. If you need any help moving to, from, or within Northern Virginia, think of us. With the full suite of moving and storage services that we offer, there is no other better name in the business than MyProMovers if you are currently in the process of finding a Northern VA moving company.?
