CK Physio, a physiotherapy company based out of London in the United Kingdom, has recently posted an article regarding the usefulness of physiotherapy. The post follows one particular case in which a Waltham Abbey man was able to regain control over his life following his therapy sessions. The man in question, Lee Cartwright, was 41 years old when he suffered a severe heart attack. Following the attack Lee lost control and movement in his left side, causing him partial paralysis.

Although Lee survived the ordeal, the loss of motion on his left side caused him to become depressed and lose interest in everyday activities which he used to enjoy. CK Physio reports that through the use of physiotherapy treatments Lee has come to find more regular movement in both sides once again, and has even become certified as a fitness instructor. Details on his certification program and the people that Lee works with now is also found throughout the publication.

The article can be seen online at <http://www.ckphysio.co.uk/index.php/blog/experts-physiotherapy-london-gave-stroke-victims-life-back/>. Here the company describes Lee's condition and treatment, as well as the benefits and ongoing requirements of physiotherapy. Bryan Kelly of CK Physio writes: "Physiotherapy has long been known to help restore physical abilities after a serious accident or injury. However, if an individual is able to return from an injury with the help of experts in physiotherapy from London even stronger than before (not necessarily physically), this is definitely a tribute to the patient's focus and self-determination."

The team at CK Physio has made it clear that the story regarding Lee's recovery has touched them as individuals. They wish to share this tale with others who may be facing similar struggles and can find encouragement in the success of others. The company invites all those interested in learning more about the physical and emotional advantages of physiotherapy to visit them online and check out the blog article. They also encourage new readers to subscribe to the blog, and follow the account for new updates and articles which are posted regularly.

Those who are seeking physiotherapy are directed to contact the company using the information on their official website.
