Michael Sadvakas, a partner at MyProMovers Chantilly, talks about the need for storage space while moving by saying, "Moving houses, cities, or states is not a trivial matter. Often, if you are moving to a new house, especially if you are selling your older home to afford your new home purchase, you are going to enter a transition period where your older home is going to be put up for display by your realtor. You will need to move all your belongings out of the house to make it more appealing to potential purchasers. However, you won't have a place to store them and you might end up waiting several months for the sale to go through before being able to buy and move into your new house. Even if you are not a homeowner and are just moving between rental homes, you also might need a dedicated space to stash your belongings while you take time to explore the new town where you are moving to by holing up in a hotel or Airbnb, while you look for the ideal apartment or house to settle into. Whatever your reason for storing your precious household items, our new warehouse space in Chantilly makes it extremely easy to store your valuables at a provider that will not only keep them safe and secure but also offer excellent logistical help when it comes to moving them to their new location. If you are ever in doubt about the quality of our infrastructure and the level of service that we offer, you are free to visit our Chantilly warehouse to verify all the arrangements yourselves."
