AVENTURA, FL - April 15, 2022 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Artlist, one of the biggest platforms for royalty-free music, has recently introduced a new subscription plan. In the latest article, IMHO Reviews explain how it works and talk about other Artlist updates and new features.

Artlist has recently changed its pricing, making the service even more affordable for its users. As of now, they offer three subscription plans, each one comes with a universal license and unlimited downloads of music and SFX. Unlimited Plan is the most popular one among users. It costs $199 per year or $16,60 per month. This plan includes unlimited use on all social media platforms, paid ads, podcasts, client work, commercial work, websites, broadcasts, and TV.

"Artlist Unlimited plan offers great value for money. If you create a lot of content both for your clients and personal projects, then this is the best option for you, because the license covers all of it. The only downside is that you can only get an annual membership, as there is no monthly plan yet. However, the price is low compared to many other similar services and you get a lot for your money," said Vitaliy Lano, the owner of IMHO Reviews.

The second subscription plan that Artlist now offers is the Enterprise plan. It is tailored specifically for organizations and companies. Artlist doesn't list the prices for this plan on its website, and anyone who wants to sign up for it needs to contact them directly. The Enterprise plan covers customized licenses, customized terms, premium customer success, and curation services.

The third plan is called the Personal plan, and it is the newest addition to the platform. Before, Artlist didn't offer a monthly plan, but after much consideration, they decided to add a Personal plan that offers both annual and monthly subscriptions. This plan costs $9,99 per month if billed annually, or $14,99 per month if billed monthly. The Personal plan covers all social media platforms, including Instagram, Facebook, YouTube, TikTok, Twitch, and podcasts.

"Many people have been really excited about the Personal plan. It is a very affordable option for social media influencers, even for those who are just starting their channels. It doesn't cover the client work, but if you are planning to use it only for your own projects, then this is a good choice. It is also great that there is finally an option of purchasing a monthly subscription because some people just need to get access to music for a month or two while they are working on a certain project," said Vitaliy.

IMHO Reviews article also talks about the expansion of the Artlist library. The company is rapidly growing, and just last year it added thousands of new songs to the library, and now has over 18,000 titles making it one of the largest providers of the royalty-free music on the market. Artlist team checks every single file that is being submitted to them and only chooses the best ones to add to the library, which ensures the high quality of all tracks.

"Artlist is a good platform for any creator who is looking for an unlimited and affordable source of royalty-free music and SFX. The license is easy to use and covers everything, the quality of music is superb, and everything you download is yours to keep even if you cancel your subscription. Right now, you can also get two months' worth of subscription for free if you sign up for an annual membership, so it is a perfect time to join Artlist," explained Vitaliy.
