Dank Cannabis Dispensary of Parkdale has recently announced that their blog can serve as a valuable resource for cannabis users in Calgary and anywhere else who wants to learn more about the cannabis plant and how to use it. The blog covers a variety of topics related to the consumption of cannabis, with posts on topics like terpenes, which are the aromatic compounds that give cannabis its distinct pungent scent, and are found in many other plants in the kingtom Plantae, or the plant kingdom. Another recent post, titled ?How to Smoke Hash Like a Pro? explains the use of hash, a form of cannabis concentrate that?s been in use by humans since sometime in ancient history. There are also posts about how to dab, Canada?s weed laws, and the definition of the term ?Dank? from which the dispensary got its name. Finally, the blog contains a number of posts about purchasing weed, and especially about purchasing weed from Dank Cannabis Dispensary in Calgary, Alberta.

One recent post, ?A Guide to Buying Concentrates?, explains the different kinds of cannabis concentrates a person might find when shopping at Dank Cannabis or another dispensary. Cannabis concentrates vary depending on the extraction and concentration process, the part of the plant used to make the concentrate, and the consistency of the final product. Because different forms of concentrate offer different advantages, as well as some different drawbacks, it can be helpful for people interested in using cannabis concentrates to learn more about the different kinds of concentrates so they can find the one that best matches the experience they are looking to have. As such, this blog post explains several popular forms of concentrate, including shatter, crumble, wax and oil. The article explains which kinds of concentrates require solvents, and the texture each concentrate has. Wax, for example, tends to be very sticky, so users find they want to use a tool to handle it, and often store it in silicone containers to avoid losing large amounts of concentrate to being stuck to the sides of the container. Another blog post explains how to use these concentrates, providing a number of methods often used to enjoy cannabis concentrates such as those sold by Dank Cannabis Dispensary.
