properties, the rose quartz as zodiac birthstone, how to use rose quartz, how to cleanse a rose quartz gemstone, and more.

Rose quartz, which is one of the healing crystals available through Tiny Rituals, is a pink form of quartz and is also known as hyaline quartz. It has a pale pink color, a hexagonal crystal system, a vitreous luster, and translucent transparency. The rose is believed to have the meaning of love and compassion, and to have a strong attachment to the heart and throat chakra. It is also believed to have physical healing properties and it is good for pregnancy and for helping improve circulation and enhancing heart health. As for its mental and emotional healing properties, it is believed to help in healing emotional wounds and in inviting more compassion and care. And with regards to its metaphysical properties, rose quartz may encourage connection and may attune to goddess energy.

Meanwhile, with regards to having better sleep, a number of crystals may be able to help. According to one of the blog articles, the crystals can be used are: selenite, celestite, lepidolte, howlite, amethyst, angelite, smoky quartz, rose quartz, black tourmaline, and moonstone. Selenite may be able to get rid of negative energy and bring clarity for the mind and zen-like calm, which make it a suitable gateway to a good night?s sleep. Celestite, like selenite, is an angel stone. It is believed to soothe jumbled thoughts and to connect to intuition and higher purpose. Lepidolite is a natural ore of lithium, which is also used ad medicine for those who have an overactive mind. It may also promote serenity via self love. Howlite is a gentle stone that is believed to bring down the heart beat to a softer rhythm and to cool tempers and hot heads. Amethys is a purifying and gentle stone that soothes the body and balances emotions. Angelite promotes physical healing and delivers messages from the spirit realms. Smoky quartz has a calming effect, rose quartz removes anxious thoughts, black tourmaline protects from bad dreams, and moonstone provides acceptance.
