Keep Driving releases an online guide that examines the list of all car brands sold in the US. The article, published on Keep Driving, was produced by the company's automobile experts. The guide was released to get a glimpse into the automotive market of 2022.

A major part of the U.S. economy is the automobile industry. New car sales were an important indicator of the country's economic health. Approximately 74-78 million vehicles are sold worldwide every year, with tens of billions of dollars worth of sales in the United States every year. Car brands have sprung up around the globe. Cars by some of these brands are available as used cars. This guide was designed to provide car enthusiasts with detailed information on which car brands are currently being sold in the US.

According to Keep Driving, their experts conducted thorough market research to compile the guide. The publication aimed to highlight the most important the most popular car brands sold in the United States to help readers understand the market. The guide explained who owns them, what they sell, and where they produce them to give a clear understanding of where the automotive industry stands today.
