IP attorneys practice intellectual property law which includes patents, trade secrets, copyrights, licensing, and trademarks. IP lawyers defend the legal rights of victims of intellectual property crimes and perform IP asset due diligence. IP lawyers need skills such as understanding and knowledge of the law relating to intellectual property matters, research skills, attention to detail, writing and analytical skills, professionalism, and oral advocacy skills. They also need to understand legal and scientific writing and the technical knowledge required to understand the intellectual property they represent.

Organizations needing assistance in the recruitment and retention of patent agents, IP litigators, IP attorneys, intellectual property specialists, patent attorneys, or other IP law professionals can contact redShift Recruiting at (315) 254-1209.
