Encinitas, California - May 20, 2022 -
Tiny Rituals, a company based in Encinitas, CA that offers crystals and gemstones with healing properties, is pleased to announce their Bestsellers Collection, such as the Chakra Worry Stone, Serene and Stress Free Tower, Black Tourmaline, Copper Healing Sphere, and more. In addition, they have also released a blog post that offers basic information on crystals for beginners. Crystals are available in a thousand shapes, colors, and styles and they don?t just look pretty but also come with a range of healing properties that people can find useful in their daily life to help provide them with a sense of balance and well-being.

It is important to note that there are crystals for protective measures, crystals for self-care, crystals for clearing chakras, crystals for attracting all that one desires, crystals for emotional energy, and more. A particular individual only needs to chose the one that works with his or her own systems of power. Choosing the right crystal involves trusting in oneself and allowing one?s intuition to serve as guide. Oftentimes, there will be more than one crystal calling out to a particular person. Building a crystal collection is often helpful and this means that one can draw on different crystals what is needed for various kinds of moods.

The blog article serves as a guide for beginners to help them chose from some of the most popular beginner crystals. These are crystals that are easy to obtain, are gentle to work with, and can provide a great way to start building a particular individual?s healing stones collection. Number one on the list of crystals for beginners is Clear Quartz, which is popular for helping with spiritual growth, getting rid of negative energies, and offering a long-term pick me up in addition to providing emotional stability for people who may be struggling. Clear quartz is regarded as a master healer and it also provides clarity and increases energy.

Amethyst is a violet and purple quartz that can easily be noticed because of its link to the crown chakra. The crown chakra is actually the highest energy point and provides the way by which people link to the higher plains and the universe on a spiritual level. The amethyst is a stone that helps nurture a calm frame of mind, deep contemplation, and an everlasting sense of tranquility. Thus, the amethyst crystal can help with sleep.

Rose Quartz is pink in color and is known for encouraging a person to develop self-love while encouraging an individual to deepen all relationships. It is regarded as a heart chakra healer and it is believed to help soothe old wounds, break down walls, and grow the capacity to trust and embrace unconditional love.

Meanwhile, Lapis Lazuli is one of the more mystical crystals but it can also serve as a beginner?s crystal for those who are interested in tuning into their own intuition and possibly even help develop their hidden psychic gifts. This is an attractive crystal in blue color and has a history of being a favorite of artists, pharaohs, and goddesses.

The Carnelian stone is believed to help connect with the root chakra and is rich in vitality. It is a part of the Chalcedony family and is one of the most stimulating starter stones. With its large amount of energy, people can use this stone to help them get back up when they are having an energy slump.

The people behind Tiny Rituals have personally seen the malnourished state of children in India, particularly those who are living in the impoverished communities. They established the company with the additional mission of offering help to those children so that they may be able to avoid suffering from vitamin A deficiency disorder.
