Miller's Home Improvement, a company offering roofing services in Clinton Township, MI, has recently published a blog post titled ?Is a Metal Roof Still an Excellent Roofing Choice?? that examines the many benefits of metal roofing. Homeowners and other property owners in Clinton Township consider the metal roofing as the ultimate in roofing because its high acquisition costs can easily be justified by its tough and highly dependable features and its many advantages. Some of these benefits are low maintenance; storm and strong weather resistance; long-lasting roof; lightweight roofing materials; speed and ease of installation; zero contamination risk; and more.

First of all, metal roofs don?t have the same types of problems that are typically experienced in other types of roofing, such as fading, cracking, wearing down, or peeling. Thus, metal roofs can last for several years without much maintenance. It may only need repainting every few years, which means that it will always be in good condition.

Metal roofs are also less likely to get damaged by storms and extreme weather. This is because metal roofing is stronger and more durable than the usual roofing materials, such as roof tiles and asphalt shingles. Metal roofing materials are capable of withstanding strong winds and heavy rain and they will not corrode, warp, or crack over time.

Metal roofing also has zero contamination risk because it has a highly-concentrated surface-area-to-weight ratio compared to the other roofing materials. This means that the metal roof will evaporate more heat compared to other types of roofs, thus decreasing the quantity of heat absorbed by the roofing material.

Meanwhile, the primary benefit of a metal roof, according to the Miller's Home Improvement blog post, is that it is far more durable and long-lasting compared to other roofs. As long as a metal roof has been properly installed and maintained, it can last for 25 to 50 years. Higher-end metal roofs, such as those made of aluminum, zinc, or copper can last for more than 50 years.

Furthermore, metal roofs are much lighter compared to other kinds of roofs. Because of this, the installation process is easy and helps the homeowner save on supporting structural elements. In addition, most metal roofing materials are available in multiple shingle sections or 12- to 36-inch panels, which means they can easily be handled and installed.

Metal roofing also allows for a low-slope roof, which is more affordable to build and requires less roofing materials compared to that of a steep slope. And for places that have heavy rains and snowfall, the metal roof provides maximum rain and snow shedding. This is because the surface of the metal roofing is hard and slippery. Also, a metal roof is more energy efficient because of its high reflectivity and emissivity.

Miller's Home Improvement provides different types of roofing services in Clinton Township. These include residential roofing; all kinds of roof repairs; roof recovers; commercial roofing; torch-down roofing; thermoplastic olefin (TPO) roofing; complete roof tear-offs and remodels; and ethylene propylene diene monomer (EPDM) roofs. They also offer a free roof inspection to evaluate roof damage, particularly after a heavy storm or extreme weather. After assessing the damage, they may recommend roof recovery services. With roof recovery, a new layer of roofing is added over the old roofing material. With the original membranes still intact, a roof recovery would be enough to completely seal and waterproof the property. However, if the damage is extensive, a roof replacement may be required.

Established in 2003, Miller's Home Improvement has the primary goal of always surpassing customer expectations when they provide their services for roofing repair, installation, or replacement that are both affordable and customizable, depending on the preferences of the homeowner or customer. They have the necessary insurance and licenses to provide both residential and commercial roofing services.
