

Christian Guitar Site Offers Chance To Win Kids Guitar Lessons

November 16, 2015

November 16, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Jean Welles Worship Guitar, a company based out of Los Angeles, CA, is offering a chance to win a Christian Guitar Lessons for kids, complete with a book, DVD, and streaming video. The course holds an overall value of $33 USD, and is designed to teach children how to hold a note, strengthen their hands, read guitar chords, create their own verses, and will also provide Christian values and memorable songs to replay time and again. The class is described as follows: "This worship guitar class program for kids will not only teach your child how to play the guitar but can also help them develop a heart of worship. The lessons start with one finger chord worship songs and plucking out melodies with individual fingers."

Although there will only be one contest winner, chosen on December 5th, 2015, every entry will reportedly receive a surprise gift at the end of the contest as well. The company has stated that they understand children learn at different levels, and that guitar is a great way to motivate brain development and social behavior. Jean Welles Worship Guitar explains: "Researchers at the University of Montreal used various brain imaging techniques to investigate brain activity during musical tasks and found that sight-reading musical scores and playing music both activate regions in all four of the cortex's lobes."

Parents and children interested in learning more about Jean Welles Worship Guitar and the Kids Guitar Lessons Contest are encouraged to visit the company website online. Here, individuals can check out an informative video, read more about what the class offers, sign up to receive the first 13 pages of the course for free, and read client reviews from other students and parents of students who have enjoyed the course.

The team advises participants to get their entries in before December 5th in order to qualify for the contest, and wishes good luck to all those who enter.
