Culpeper, Virginia - May 23, 2022 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Semantic Links, a company based in Culpeper, VA, has recently launched their white label link building services that have been specifically developed for local SEO agencies and consultants. They are also ready to provide a free competitive analysis report for prospective customers. They expect to show that SEO agencies and consultants have been wasting money on the conventional link building techniques that have decreased in effectiveness in recent months. This is because Google's natural language processor (NLP) algorithm, called BERT, has become more and more effective in detecting backlinks from non-relevant sources and then devaluing them.

Bradley Benner, founder of Semantic Links, says, "We provide a free competition analysis report with a 3-month link building plan plus a complimentary call to review it for the client location of your choice. We go over the current state of your client's backlink profile and how it compares to the top five ranked competitors for the target search query. We then layout the custom link building plan for outranking those competitors and provide the timeline for achieving the desired results."

The devaluing of backlinks from non-relevant sources is happening because topical relevance is of prime importance in the age of the semantic web. Unfortunately, most link building services are offering over-priced links found on unrelated source domains based on what they consider to be useless metrics. What is important for Google is to continue to become better in understanding topics and links from sources that are appropriate and related to the topic that is being searched. And when these links from relevant sources are further confirmed by user engagement signals, such as clicks and traffic, they're given more authority and create even better results.

They want to emphasize that the white label link building service they provide is unmatched because they only: provide 100 percent exclusive source domains with clean histories and backlink profiles that are topically relevant; publish SEO optimized and well-tuned content on professionally and beautifully built HTML sites that are cloud-hosted; and send click-through rate (CTR) referral traffic signals through all the links in order to avoid ?link atrophy? and to keep the the links strong.

They provide hands-free link building, which means that they will handle everything using their three-step process. First, they will examine the competition by analyzing the top five ranked competitors for each targeted search query and they will provide a graphic report indicating what exactly is required for the client to be able to compete. The second step is to develop a customized link building plan for the client and then specify a timeline of expected accomplishments for the client having their preferred organic and maps search position results. And the third and final step is for the team at Semantic Links to put the plan into action with their 100 percent DFY service, which is truly hands-free for the client. They will take care of everything and then provide the client with transparent reporting.

That their white label link building service really works is evidenced by the highly positive five star reviews they have received from clients. For instance, on Google, Daniel C. gave them five stars and said, ?So glad I found Semantic Links and am really pleased with the results. Brad is very passionate about SEO and highly knowledgeable, and one of the most caring and giving people in this industry that I have ever come across. He is always happy to chat about how things are going and provide regular updates. The knowledge I have gained throughout the process has been invaluable to me. If you're looking for someone you can trust to get the job done and deliver outstanding results, look no further.?
