Santa Clarita, California - May 20, 2022 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Santa Clarita, California. NFTOrbitor.com has released a report directed at beginners on the basics of NFTs. The report aims at covering the basics as well as educating the reader on the vastness of the NFT market.

The NFT market is worth approximately $22 billion which is a reason so many people are being drawn to this market. Before investing in NFTs, NFTOrbitor.com strongly encourages readers to understand where NFTs derive their value from and what drives the value of NFTs up. They emphasize that investors should base their investing decisions on research and not on guesswork.

"NFT talk is not going anywhere," stated Raul Meza, content director at NFTOrbitor.com. "But many people are confused because defi has so many sectors and moving pieces. Even in the NFT space alone there is so many uses for it including how to make money from it. That's why we decided to break down the space for our readers who consider themselves beginners."

The report covers the importance of the history of NFTs and explains what they are. NFTs consist of metadata, which is the digital asset's information and its contract stored on the blockchain. The ownership history is part of this information.

The value of the NFT increases if it's owned by someone that has more credibility in the market, for example, an MNC, a famous artist, a celebrity, etc. In NFT investing research, it is wise to include NFTs that are owned by enterprises or people with substantial brand value.

"If there is one thing you can count on in the Defi space is change. That is also true about NFTs. That's why we created NFTOrbitor.com, it's a space where we keep people informed and updated," continued Meza.
