A local New Jersey drain and sewer repair company, Chapelwood Home Services, has released new drain cleaning clog tricks on their website for clients who need to unclog toilets pipes and other drains around a home or business. The team at Chapelwood has stated that blockages and clogs are quite common in the sewer industry, but there are more ways than one to get these clogs sorted out.

The company has said that drains clog for a number of reasons, including the use of greases and even soaps. These can create a residual buildup with each use, and eventually that buildup will become impossible for water to get through. Kitchen sinks can also be blocked with food particles, while shower drains are often blocked with hair from time to time. Toilets can also be problematic due to the amount of paper and other debris which gets flushed or dropped down inside every day.

Chapelwood has made it clear through their website at <http://www.sewercleanernewton.com/>, that those who are not trained professionally in drain clearing, should call for the help of an expert before attempting to unclog a blockage on their own. The explain: "While there are products on the market that offer a do-it-yourself remedy, these often only provide a temporary fix and can cause bigger problems down the road. Our technicians have the proper tools to rid your drains of clogs without damaging your pipes or your property in the process."

However, they have released a few tips and tricks which homeowners can resort to if they are unable to call in a professional at the time of a blockage. One of these remedies is a simple mixture of baking soda and vinegar, which fizz on contact. They say that this solution isn't going to work like the specialized cleaners used by Chapelwood Home Services, but it will push gunk and debris around in a sink drain, making it easier for water to drain. Boiling water also works for this purpose, especially if the clog is based on grease or soap buildup, as the heat helps to dissolve some of this mess. Some people reportedly also resort to snaking tools, which can be purchased at many home hardware stores. These can be quite handy, but need to be used correctly or they will only block the drain further or cause damage to pipes.

The company can be found online through their official website at <http://www.chapelwoodseweranddrain.com>. Here, customers can find more interesting sewer and drain information through the Chapelwood Home Blog.
