NE Guard releases a new article on detecting eavesdropping devices. The guide, published on NE Guard's website, was compiled using expert opinions on the topic. The guide was released amid the increasing advancements in technological devices.

As a result of technological advancement, it is becoming more difficult for people to protect their privacy. Eavesdropping devices are one such example. Although eavesdropping devices are difficult to detect, there are certain steps one can take to protect themselves. The good news is that anyone can detect hidden microphones and cameras without engaging a professional service if they suspect they are being bugged. Regular inspection is key to an effective sweep, regardless of whether bugs were found in the house during the last check. The publication analyzes the process of conducting an effective 'sweep' of a room. The experts in the guide explained what someone could do to find out if their room has been bugged.

For the guide, security experts were consulted for their professional views on finding eavesdropping devices. Tech experts were also quoted in the article. The final compilation and review of the guide were overseen by NE Guard's team of security experts. Readers can find the full guide by visiting their page:
