Brooklyn car accident attorney Samantha Kucher releases a new article (<https://www.rrklawgroup.com/when-is-it-too-late-to-get-a-lawyer-for-a-car-accident/>) explaining the statutes of limitations for filing personal injury claims in NYC. The lawyer says that no one is prepared to be in an accident. The long-term effects of car accidents on someone's life can be severe.

"You may have been transported to an emergency room and faced medical intervention to deal with your injuries. The days and weeks have slipped by, and you finally realized that while you have been focused on your healing, doctor's visits, and medical care, you have lost critical time away from work, and bills are piling up," says the Brooklyn car accident attorney.

The lawyer explains that car accidents can cause emotional and physical traumas. Victims may be required to pay more than their insurance company covers in some cases. As soon as possible, a car accident lawyer should be retained to help the victim seek out compensation for their injuries.

Attorney Samantha Kucher, says that victims may still be able to contact a personal injury lawyer so long as the statute of limitations has not expired. After a car accident, the statute of limitations for filing a lawsuit is three years. To recover damages, survivors of a fatal accident may file a suit.

In the article, Kucher also states that New York has no-fault insurance laws. Sometimes, certain aspects of these laws might be restricted. If another driver partially caused the accident, they may also be held accountable for the injuries of the victim.

According to attorney Kucher, "While there are a variety of causes for car accidents, there are some car collisions that are more common in the city of New York. New York City street is a busy place which results in a lot of car and motorcycle collisions. Driver distraction or inattention, drunk driving or drug-impaired driving, reckless car driving, and many others are just some of the most common causes of car accidents in New York."

Lastly, the lawyer reminds victims that it is important to get the advice of an experienced personal accident lawyer. An experienced lawyer may be able to guide victims in seeking compensation for their injuries. A lawyer can also help the victim understand their legal rights.
