Alexander Shunnarah Trial Attorneys has represented many truck accident victims in their legal fight for justice and won rightful compensation for their economic and non-economic losses. Accidents involving these trucks can be catastrophic due to their sheer size and blind spots. However, some causes of semi-truck accidents are more common than others.

The article blamed eighty-eight percent of truck-related crashes on truck driver error. According to the top truck accident law firm, most of these accidents result from speeding, negligent driving, distracted driving, failure to check blind spots before switching lanes, substance abuse, and driver exhaustion.

The Franklin law firm states that truck drivers must abide by their hours-of-service policies, which are laws that mandate rest time for truck drivers. Unfortunately, some drivers and trucking companies flout these rules, causing sleep deprivation and fatigue. Alexander Shunnarah Trial Attorneys notes that this is one of the major causes of many truck drivers losing concentration and coordination while driving.

Another cause of truck accidents is mechanical problems with the truck, such as faulty brakes, unsafe tires, unsecured cargo space, and outdated safety technology. It can also be due to the semi-truck being loaded unevenly.

Another common cause of truck accidents is inexperience in driving in poor weather conditions, which makes the large truck prone to skidding, hydroplaning, or jackknifing.

The big size, weight, and force of a semi-truck make them an inherent danger to others on the road. Professional truck accident injury lawyers suggest victims immediately contact the police after an accident.

A trial lawyer understands the complexities of a truck accident case and is skilled enough to navigate the complex legal system on behalf of the victim, getting the best outcome of financial compensation for medical expenses, lost income, pain, suffering, and more.
