In April 2021, Herman Miller made the biggest acquisition in its history and merged with Knoll, another American design firm that has played an equally important role in guiding the principles of American office design that are now ubiquitous. The new company will be led by the President and CEO of Herman Miller, Andi Owen. Owen acknowledged that the acquisition was a major milestone in the company?s history and she thanked every individual involved for their support during the transaction. The CEO exulted the possibilities that lay in front of MillerKnoll by saying that ?together we can be truly inclusive, design for everyone, and care for our planet.? Owen also remarked that the new company?s broad portfolio of home and office products, its global footprint, and advanced digital capabilities will allow it to meet its customers? expectations better than ever before.
