A spokesperson for Reed Maintenance Services Inc. gives examples of the many challenges that its equipment mechanics must deal with regularly by saying, ?We serve hundreds of customers every month and our top-of-the-line equipment goes through the expected wear and tear. Some customers end up overloading the dumpsters or not stacking their waste with an equal weight distribution leading to undue stress on our equipment. Some customers might also unintentionally dispose of prohibited waste such as paint cans, aerosol cans, oil, tires, chemicals, sewage, hazardous wastes, liquids, and batteries. We need specialists who are trained in fixing such issues and can anticipate the possible problems that roll-off dumpster rentals are most likely to face.?

When asked about the qualities that the company is looking for in the ideal candidate for the equipment mechanic position, its spokesperson says, ?To be a productive team member at Reed Maintenance Services Inc., you need a curious mind, an acuity for learning, and a penchant for problem-solving. You need to ability to diagnose mechanical problems and to do so within time and budget constraints. The local Alabama and Tennessee communities that we serve, rely heavily on our services. This is especially true of professional contractors and construction companies who regularly book our dumpsters. All our customers need the assurance that the dumpster they booked will be delivered to the agreed-upon location, on time, in an optimal state, and ready to bear the load of the waste that they want to dispose of. Meeting this fundamental customer expectation is key to our business and our promise of quality services. As an equipment mechanic, you will bear a significant portion of this responsibility. Therefore, we need people who are on top of their game and are ready to face the dynamic challenges that await them in the waste management industry. If you are qualified, experienced, and think you have what it takes to join our high-performing team, give us a call today and we will kickstart your job application. You can look forward to a long and fruitful career in waste management if you make it through to the other end of the interview process.?
