August 04, 2022 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Portland, Oregon: Octopus Home Inspections is proud to announce its most comprehensive home inspection services in Portland, Oregon. Their thorough and objective building inspection services have helped countless buyers, sellers, and homeowners in the greater Portland area. The company is InterNACHI® certified and follows all relevant standards of practice, which are the most comprehensive in the industry.

Their new construction home inspection service is designed specifically for newly built homes and can help ensure that a house is in top condition from the very start. Part of their comprehensive service includes a thorough evaluation of the home's foundation walls and footings, crawlspaces, framing, major mechanical systems like HVAC units, plumbing and electrical systems, fire safety measures, and the home's exterior.

In addition to new construction inspections, they also offer sewer scope inspections to detect potential problems with underground drainage lines. The company's experienced team uses specialized technology to identify cracks, root intrusion, pipe separation, pooling water, and broken or collapsed lines in the system.

Additionally, their radon testing can identify problems with air quality and ventilation.

Chris Barry, the owner and operator of Octopus Home Inspections, has over 10 years of experience in the residential energy efficiency industry. Before starting this company, we worked in the residential energy efficiency sector and performed home energy audits and new home verifications. This background has provided us with a level of expertise in energy efficiency that is above and beyond the scope of most home inspectors. We apply our unique knowledge and skills in this area to help people save money and live more comfortably in their homes, he stated.

Clients can trust that Octopus Home Inspections will provide an honest, unbiased, and professional assessment of any property.
