November 17, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Jamie's Physical Therapy & Sports Medicine, a clinic based in Aliquippa, PA, is proud to announce that they have organized a food run between November 3 and November 24, 2015. The food drive allows the clinic to give back to the community, in the spirit of Thanksgiving. Further details are available on the clinic's website home page.

"Thanksgiving is about expressing gratitude, but it is also simply about giving," says Jamie Young owner of Jamie's Physical Therapy & Sports Medicine. "I have so much to be thankful for and I know many of my patients do too. I encourage everyone who can spare anything to make donations of non-perishable food items and toiletries to our clinic to be taken to the local Salvation Army."

All donations will be given to the Beaver County Salvation Army Food Bank. The staff at Jamie's Physical Therapy will drive the donations down personally. People can either donate straight to the Food Bank, or drop things off at the clinic.

Through the food drive, the clinic wants to encourage residents to give back to their community as much as possible. Further details and updates will be made available through the clinic's Facebook page, which people are being asked to follow.
