July 06, 2022

Las Vegas, Nevada - July 06, 2022 -
87 Movers Las Vegas is helping current and prospective residents of Las Vegas to decide where to move next. The moving services company has published a blog post on its website that summarizes the perks of living in some of the city?s most enticing neighborhoods.

The blog post begins by highlighting two planned communities - Green Valley Ranch and Westgate. Green Valley Ranch is an exclusive gated residential community that is spread over 1300 acres out of which more than 200 acres are reserved for community amenities like parks, schools, recreational centers, open space areas, and pedestrian and bike paths. Westgate is another master-planned community that currently boasts around 100,000 residents and features five golf courses, two outdoor theaters, more than 40 parks, and various trails.

For young professionals who are just starting their careers, affordable housing options are available in Green Valley South and Green Valley North. According to Niche.com, the median home price in these two neighborhoods is around $320,000. The neighborhoods rank high on diversity and offer plenty of entertainment, dining, and shopping opportunities. Green Valley South boasts of the exclusive Green Valley

Country Club which includes an 18-hole championship course designed by Jack Nicklaus.

Next, Summerlin is a great option for all demographics as its residents are a healthy mix of young professionals, families, and retirees. On Niche.com, it is voted the #1 best neighborhood to live in Las Vegas which is a glowing recommendation since homes in the area have a median home value of just $328,000. Currently, the area has a population of almost 100,000 residents.

For those looking to get closer to nature, the Macdonald Ranch community is a great option. The region has a sparse feel that should appeal to retirees or anyone who craves some peace and quiet. It offers easy access to Red Rock Canyon National Conservation Area and Mt. Charleston Ski Resort, thus also making it a great option for those looking for a vacation home. The neighborhood?s home prices are higher than average as the median home value is just under $450,000.

Finally, Gibson Springs offers affordable housing in an area that is just 30 minutes away from the strip and yet has peaceful living conditions with plenty of access to lakes, parks, pools, and more. Gibson Springs is ranked #2 among the best neighborhoods for young professionals in Henderson, Nevada by Niche.com.

The spokesperson for 87 Movers Las Vegas talks about its initiative on educating prospective Las Vegas residents about the best neighborhoods in the city by saying, ?Unless you have lived here for a couple of years, it would be difficult for you to determine the best places to live in Las Vegas Valley. However, since the region is such a draw for people from all over the country, we felt that it was important to answer this question for those considering the move.
