London, UK ? It can be a decision of thought to which no more thought is given, but when it comes to a wedding, the photographer holds all the cards. In keeping with their mission to educate photographers, Pixcellence (www.pixcellence.co.uk) has just published a new blog post entitled 'How Bonding with a Wedding Photographer Makes for Great Wedding Photos'.

'It makes sense to befriend your photographer since they need to know what you want to project and what you find meaningful,' states Clwyd Probert, one half of the Pixcellence photography team. 'It is thru their lens that the world will witness your union, and sharing your enthusiasm could definitely make for more meaningful images.'

According to an article in the Knot referred to here, 'In order to get the best photos, one should go with a pro who has a firm grasp of social graces but is also bold enough to go out hunting for great images and who 'puts the bridal couple at ease and doesn't irritate them in any way'. They'll be shadowing the couple's every move, and the more comfortable both are with the photographer, the better the photos will turn out'.

?Unlike the work of your other wedding vendors (music, flower arrangements, cake),? stated Probert, ?photographs aren?t things you can hear, smell, taste or even see at first ? you don?t really know what you?re getting until after the fact. That means careful research and selectiveness regarding professional skills, artistic style and personal demeanour are extra-important when choosing your photographer.?

Pixcellence offers coaching courses to help photographers of all levels improve their photographic talents teaching photographic techniques and educating the public about cross-cultural wedding customs.
