July 06, 2022 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Brooklyn Truck Accident Lawyers at Kucher Law Group release a new article (<https://www.rrklawgroup.com/truck-accident-lawyer/>) explaining the major differences between a truck accident and a car accident. The lawyers explain in the article that truck accidents are the deadliest type of motor vehicle collisions. Truck crashes also account for about half of all automobile fatalities in America.

The article from the Brooklyn truck accident lawyers says, "It can be difficult to sort through all the confusion after a truck crash. However, it is important to notify the police and emergency personnel as soon as possible so they can assist and provide any necessary medical attention to injuries sustained from the crash."

The lawyers from Kucher Law say that in order for an incident claim to be filed, it is essential that all parties involved give statements and that any witnesses are found by the police. All evidence must be documented, including photos of the damage and testimonies from witnesses.

Attorney Samantha Kucher, the lawyer who founded the firm, says it is helpful to have a camera and a phone handy when documenting the damages caused by a truck accident. Photographs will allow the individual responsible for the accident to document any details that law enforcement may have missed.

Kucher Law's injury lawyers explain that truck accidents are more common than car accidents. Trucks have a greater insurance policy coverage than private cars. Insurance companies will do everything possible to avoid liability in truck accidents. Truck accidents pose a higher risk of death than car accidents.

In general, if a truck driver was negligent and he/she caused an accident that injured or killed someone else, then he/she will likely be held responsible for damages to those victims. But the trucking company, any owners leasing and maintaining the vehicle, as well as any other parties involved in the accident may be partly responsible for damages, says attorney Samantha Kucher.

Lastly, the lawyer emphasizes that it's very important to understand your rights when it comes to claiming compensation for a truck accident injury. Having an experienced lawyer may be able to help a victim navigate the complexities of the legal system.
