Bloomington, IL based Insurance Covered CPAP is helping Americans with sleep apnea get access to insurance covered CPAP machines and supplies across the nation. While many are unfortunately unaware about the risks people with sleep apnea face, including poorer health and the erosion of their quality of life, the company remains committed to raising awareness of this condition as well as the opportunity for people to get the equipment they need through their insurer.

The company explains that a person is considered to have some form of sleep apnea if their breathing stops and starts during sleep. There are three types of sleep apnea: obstructive, central and mixed, with the first of these being the most common. Since many symptoms occur during sleep, the company suggests that anyone who suspects they may have sleep apnea to have a partner or friend help monitor them during sleep. In addition to uneven breathing (stopping and starting) symptoms include the person making gasping, snorting or choking noises, snoring loudly and waking up several times without restful sleep.

This lack of sleep will also contribute to the person experiencing additional symptoms during their waking hours, such as a headache upon waking up, increased fatigue, difficulty concentrating, mood swings and so on. If these symptoms become apparent and persist for more than a few days, the company strongly recommends that the affected party see their doctor. If a friend or partner has witnessed these symptoms, it is also recommended that they accompany the patient to help describe their condition to the healthcare provider. Some may require a sleep test to confirm they have sleep apnea. Should this be the case, Insurance Covered CPAP can provide a convenient, cost-effective at-home sleep test. This removes yet another barrier for those who need CPAP therapy.

Once the presence of sleep apnea is confirmed, a doctor will often encourage the patient to obtain and make use of a Continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP) machine. This medical device, used in CPAP therapy, is extremely effective for managing obstructive sleep apnea as it applies continuous air pressure to the upper respiratory tract of the person in question as they sleep. In fact, studies have shown that CPAP can completely eliminate obstructive sleep apneas in the people who use the therapy ? if they comply with all instructions and continue use.

However, one of the major issues preventing people from using this life-changing device is its cost. In addition to the first investment in the main device, other CPAP supplies have to be replaced around four times a year, which can be costly for a lot of people to maintain. Fortunately, this is where Insurance Covered CPAP is able to help.

To begin with, a person who needs CPAP therapy can simply visit the company?s official website and submit a few details that will help the team determine how they can qualify for CPAP via insurance. This easy, 3-step process is their best avenue for making sure they are covered by insurance.

Insurance Covered CPAP says that more than 25 million Americans suffer from sleep apnea, and this has led the company to build an incredibly diverse network of insurers and associate resources that can help people get the supplies they need at either low or no cost. Among these resources are manufacturers like ResMed, Philips Respironics, Fisher & Paykel, 3B Medical and Resvent, all of which are notable for being the leading providers of CPAP devices and supplies in the country. The quality of their products is unquestionable, and Insurance Cover CPAP says every patient who approaches their team for help can take advantage of this.

The company offers numerous services that are designed to help Americans with sleep apnea get a better night?s rest. Along with helping people get their CPAP machine covered by insurance, the company provides access to telehealth instructors who can teach them to safely and effectively use their device. When replacement supplies are needed, the company also provides shipment at no additional cost. All of this is available through Insurancecoveredcpap.com.
