Insurance Covered CPAP, a MedSource LLC company, is pleased to announce that they are ready to help patients qualify for a continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP) machine through insurance. They offer various kinds of CPAP, Auto-CPAP, and Bi-PAP machines with shipping within the US provided for free. The CPAP machine is typically prescribed for patients with obstructive sleep apnea, which is a disorder where the patient suffers from pauses or interruptions in breathing, usually because the airways or throat briefly collapse or something blocks them temporarily. The CPAP is designed to correct the problem by sending a steady flow of pressurized air into the nose and mouth while the patient is asleep. This keeps the airways open and allows the patient to breathe normally.

Patients who believe they have sleep apnea will need to consult with their doctor and get a prescription for a CPAP machine. They may then choose from the various CPAP machines available through Insurance Covered CPAP and fill out the online form available on the website. Insurance Covered CPAP will then contact the patient's insurance firm and submit the required paperwork on their behalf and once approved, they will deliver the CPAP machine to the patient.

Sleep apnea is a potentially life-threatening condition that happens when the throat airway narrows due to the muscles relaxing during sleep, resulting into the reduction of the amount of oxygen that can pass through. Estimates indicate that about one in 15 people suffer from sleep apnea and that 80 percent who have it are undiagnosed. If the condition is left untreated, it can lead to potentially life-threatening health issues, including stroke and other heart problems.

A CPAP machine is equipped with a compressor that serves as the source of the continuous stream of pressurized air that goes through an air filter and goes to the patient through a mask that is sealed and worn around the nose and mouth. A potential downside of a CPAP machine is that the patient may need some time to get used to wearing the mask while sleeping. It should be noted, however, that the potential advantages for the sleep apnea patient are significant and more than make up for the discomfort. These include: reduction and even possible elimination of snoring; assurance that the airway is always open while the patient is asleep; improvement of the quality of sleep; reduction or even elimination of sleepiness during the daytime; and decrease in high blood pressure.
